For the Love of Art and Design

Equine Park, Selangor, Malaysia: 21st June 2010... Art lovers were truly impressed with the spectacular showcase of the art and design masterpieces by the Alice Smith School's GCSE O Level, AS Level and A2 Level students. The high quality works were on display for one week in the respective Art and Design Technology Departments.

Held annually, the Art and Design Show is a great opportunity to showcase the creativity and excellence of our young talents highlighting what they have to offer in the world of art and design.

Walking around admiring the pieces, remarks such as "What a beautiful piece. I wish that I could purchase this for my wall!" were heard.

Some of the design technology work produced by the students have also been successfully commercialised by renowned companies, a testament to the capability of our students.

"A lot of time and effort has been put into both shows and the quality of the pieces is tremendous. The stunning display is a testament to the creativity and intellectual output of our students. The Alice Smith School has a reputation of offering the highest quality of experience for our students and staff by providing a learning environment that is both supportive and challenging. This is evident in the high quality of the work on display" said Mrs Valerie Thomas-Peter, Director of School.

Adds Adam Phillips, Head of Design and Technology, "As always, the outstanding exhibition showcases students' progress and achievement at all levels of ability in the three tier of examinations level: GCSE, AS and A2 Level. What is extra special this year is the variety of materials used in the resistant material projects and the spectrum of graphic product works. As well as this, the school still remains committed to its view of using materials that are environmentally friendly".

A team of dedicated staff and students worked together to make the show a success.

"This year's show demonstrates the outstanding commitment and dedication of students, especially the rise in quality within students' skills and techniques. This is particularly evident in their sketchbook practice. There is no distinctive 'house' style or practice, the strength of the Art department is the individuality of the students' ideas and outcomes in our quest to be an outstanding department" says David Boyle, Creative and Expressive Arts Faculty Leader.

The Alice Smith School always believes in nurturing young talents to unleash their fullest potential for a successful international future.
